Roman Frontier Research Summer Workshop 2025

The Roman Frontiers ECR Network is thrilled to announce our biggest development yet – a summer research workshop!

Together with our colleagues at the Römisch-Germanische Kommission and Johannes Gutenberg-Universität, Mainz, we are hosting an in-person research workshop 21-25 July, 2025. In the framework of a writing and research retreat, the workshop will offer skills development, networking opportunities, and unparalleled resources for work on Roman frontiers. The workshop will be held in the RGK, in Frankfurt am Main.

The workshop days will be split between participant presentations, moderated by an international group of frontiers scholars, and uninterrupted time in the RGK Library, which holds the most extensive collection of frontier publications in Europe. There will also be a field trip to Mainz, Roman Mogontiacum, and the new Leibniz Zentrum für Archäologie (LEIZA). The workshop will provide accommodation and travel stipends for participants from outside the Rhein-Main region.

Participation is by application. Applicants should be writing their PhD dissertation or early (within 6 years of degree) in the postdoctoral stages of their career.

Applications are due 15 March, 2025.

Visit the Roman Frontiers ECR Network website for more information and the application form.
